A WRETCHED AND GLORIOUS LIFE
BY ADONNIS GREGORY

“Life is glorious, but life is also wretched. It is both. Appreciating the gloriousness inspires us, encourages us, cheers us up, gives us a bigger perspective, energizes us. We feel connected.

But if that’s all that’s happening, we get arrogant and start to look down on others, and there is a sense of making ourselves a big deal and being really serious about it, wanting it to be like that forever. The gloriousness becomes tinged by craving and addiction.

On the other hand, wretchedness, life’s painful aspect, softens us up considerably. Knowing pain is a very important ingredient of being there for another person. When you are feeling a lot of grief, you can look right into somebody’s eyes because you feel you haven’t got anything to lose, you’re just there.

The wretchedness humbles us and softens us. Gloriousness and wretchedness need each other. One inspires us, the other softens us. They go together.”

By Pema Chödrön

Life is both Wretched and Glorious

This last year has rocked my world. My first walloping dose of wretchedness in a long time. This year I was diagnosed with colon cancer, stage 3.

And in this intensity, as Pema predicts, I found myself more real. I found myself more humble, needing to reach out and ask for help. And also, more present with myself and with my situation. I lived each day more and more in the present moment.

I began to pay attention to what and how I eat, I began to use music to raise the energy of my environment, I chose to connect consciously with my spirit guides and helpers every day, and I began to listen to the wisdom of my body. In fact, my body became a dear and wonderful friend.

It is from this experience I realized I was truly fortunate and blessed. I felt gratitude every day, for my friends, for my family, for each moment even though I was very weak and living in a horrendous brain fog and couldn’t think straight.

It is truly amazing the things I learned from this experience. For some time I felt broken by things I cannot change. And yet comforted by the fact that there are some things I just have no

Can you believe it is already 2018? It is true that time just flies! As we get ready to begin a new year, I have some very important realizations about this past year I'd like to share. Many of the lessons I have been learning, or thought I had learned, are presenting themselves again in my life. One of my biggest fears is being on my own, and being able to handle all of my responsibilities on my own. Although I have proven that I am very self-reliant and have been successfully making it on my own for years, the fear still creeps in sometimes. Last winter, and again for the last few months, I have had situation after situation occur where I had a challenge, had to find a solution and was able to get through it. Not always "on my own," sometimes with help, but the point is: I came out the other side. This process has helped me realize that I must still need refining in this area.

In early December when my daughter and I went to the tree farm to pick out our Christmas tree, I realized that although I am extremely hard on myself and don't always measure up to my own expectations, I have taught my children some important lessons, while learning them myself. A couple years ago, I took both daughters to the tree farm and had a mini-panic attack when I thought we couldn't saw our tree down, load it up and get it home by ourselves. My daughters had to remind me, using humor that we could do anything as a team! We left carrying the tree over our shoulders belting out "Soul Sisters!" This year, as my youngest daughter and I went to the tree farm, I had a small flash of fear; but again, we accomplished our task and had fun in the process.

We teach our children more by our actions and the way we live our life than by any other method. They are watching how we react to others, what we say under our breath and how we handle it when we get cut off driving down the road. We are not perfect and cannot be expected to be perfect role models, but we can try our best, keep communicating with our families and use teachable moments in our lives to help our children learn.

Someone once taught me that when you are not sure what to do next, just do the next indicated thing. Meaning you may not have the whole challenge solved, but one little step can you take toward a solution. Like the saying goes, "How do you eat an elephant? One bite at a time." I have learned if I break large, overwhelming things down into smaller chunks and then prioritize those smaller chunks, I can work through the steps one by one.

Another important lesson I have learned is that people like to help others. It is truly a gift to allow another to help you. Think about how good it feels when you help others...if you are able to receive help, you are allowing the other person to have those good feelings, too. We have to be courageous enough to ask for help when we need it and accept it when we are offered it. We truly are all connected and need to be there to uplift and support one another.

"The best way to find yourself is to lose yourself in the service of others."

~Mahatma Gandhi

So as we head into a sparkling, brand new, beautiful year let's remember to teach our children to be self-reliant, to be of service to others and to be able to accept help when needed. Let's work on being as healthy, happy and loving as we can be. Let's make 2018 our best year yet!

Thank you, God!

control over and I can just let go and relax.

One day, after three months of going through the very difficult and awful energies of sickness and death, I realized I was going to live. I just knew. Then I began to feel alive and I began to Feel Real.

Funny thing, I began to see falseness around me without judgment, just curiosity for what is beyond that falseness and those barriers and those walls. And I realized the falseness does not come from how you feel, it comes from how you hide what you feel, how you avoid what you feel, living in denial of where you are right now, in this moment.

We would be so much closer, able to give and receive so much more, if we could just be authentic and real about Right Now. The world needs real people. It doesn't matter if they need help or if they don't have it all together. Today I am able to sit with people who are in pain and not have to spoon out platitudes, fix them, or help them figure it out.

Today, I am able to see that both wretched and glorious in this life is actually required. What if it's this that gives us beauty and richness and depth? What if it is most often deeply beneficial, and exceptionally real?

I Am Prosperous

A New Year is upon us, what will you bring into being?
The old becomes nourishment for the new, but the old, of itself, shall not suffice.

The greatest of things are done now, only now. We call in a new name,

And a way is made, out of nothing and out of nowhere;
Here we find the best that is in us, to be, to have, to do.

And while we may sometimes judge ourselves by our intentions,

The world instead judge us by our actions,

Even yet within us lies all things beyond, pure potential.
And so from here, let us walk in the sunlight of the Spirit.

Together we go, to live the best life that is within us now,
And answer the Great Call, heard in the depths of our being.

In getting, do we learn Divine Grace;

In giving, do we know Divine Love,

And in sharing all in between do we live in the true
Prosperity of God.

May your greatest potential indeed awaken in you this year, now.

I come from Love, I live as Love, I return to Love
